Smugglers' Notch is your New England summer destination

There's plenty of fun to be had at Smugglers' Notch this summer.

Planning a weekend getaway? We know the perfect place. ELIE LEVINE

Known for its gorgeous ski slopes, Smugglers' Notch, nestled in the Green Mountains, is no less fun in the summer months. Take the whole family up to Vermont for a weekend of fun both indoors and out.

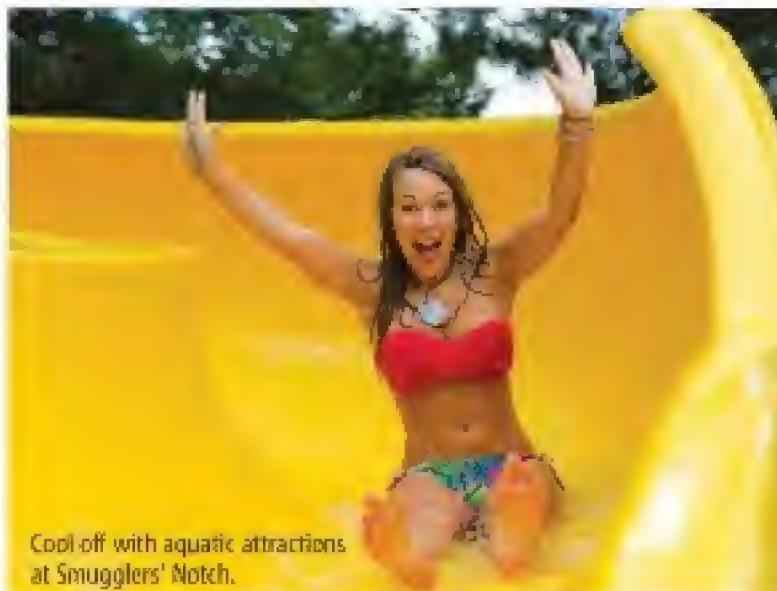

Spend time in the great outdoors

Vermont in the summertime is replete with panoramic vistas, lush foliage, historic churches and placid mountain lakes. Smugglers' Notch, located right in the heart of the scenery, is a great spot for outdoor fun. Get out there on a mountain bike, zipline through the forest or take a guided walk with a naturalist. Local waterways offer even more opportunities for fun. You can take the kids fishing, jump into a local swimming hole or enjoy kayaking, canoeing and stand-up paddleboarding at Bootlegger's Basin.

Take a dip in a mountainside pool

Swimming is the perfect way to beat the heat waves hitting New England this summer. The kid-friendly Mountain-side Water Playground at Smugglers' Notch is full of aquatic attractions, including a 300-foot-long, 30-foot-tall Giant Rapid River Ride. If the size of that ride seems daunting, the Turtle Mini-Waterslide plunges the littlest water-lovers into a shallow pool. Smaller guests can also float through Little Smugglers' Lagoon, a lazy river no deeper than 2 feet. The deeper Mountain-side Lap Pool invites you to relax and swim, with feature films projected onto an inflatable screen above the pool every Tuesday evening. The Mountainside Cabana sells cocktails, mocktails and light meals so you can refuel by the pool.

Cool off with aquatic attractions at Smugglers' Notch.

Enjoy exciting nightlife and gourmet food

A dozen dining options at Smugglers' Notch cater to your every craving, from breakfast buffets and baked goods to gourmet meals paired with artisanal drinks. Much of the resort's food is locally sourced and artisanally crafted. At the end of a fun-filled day, taste-test Vermont craft beer at The Pub at The Mountain Grille or enjoy specialty cocktails at The Morse Mountain Grille. The extensive menu at Hearth & Candle features sockeye salmon, lobster tagliatelle, and wild mushroom polenta with local cheese.

Your evenings will be as full as your days when you take advantage of the exciting entertainment options at Smugglers' Notch. Take in a performance by the Smuggs House Band or Goodtime Charlie & Jammin' Sam. Martell's at the Red Fox, a nearby music venue, features local acts such as the Lee Ross Funk Experience and the Shady Tree-O. Karaoke night on Friday is perfect if you prefer to exercise your own vocal chords. Jammin' Sam also hosts weekly Teen Jam Sessions for the kids.

Enjoy a great view of Vermont's lush mountains.

There's fun for the whole family.

Vineyard this summer.

A chef's guide to Martha's Vineyard

Chef Erin Clarke shares here three favorite spots on the island. MATT JULI

Because there's so much to see and do during the busy summer months, visiting Martha's Vineyard can feel overwhelming. Luckily, chef Erin Clarke, who's launching an expanded menu at Alchemy in Edgartown this weekend, is happy to help out by providing some insight into the island.

"Martha's Vineyard is an island full of closely guarded secrets and as a humble 'wash-ashore,' I'm not privy to all the island has to offer," Clarke says. "But I will say that the natives are kind and generous, so take a minute to start a conversation at the local pub, bus stop or post office and heed their advice; you won't be sorry. So far, this is what I have discovered in my short stay here."

Caroline Tuthill Preserve & Great Rock in Chillmark

"I have a rather large dog that requires walks, runs and playtime. I've lived in quite a few places, and Martha's Vineyard by far offers some of the best hiking. I do the trails in the Caroline Tuthill Preserve every morning with Jean Luc and Great Rock Bight on the weekends."

Biplane & The Farm Institute at Right Fork

"Both of these are on your way out to Katama Beach. Take the time one day to stop and take a biplane tour or stroll the Farm Institute. The Right Fork Diner is a great early a.m. breakfast if you can get in!"

Menemsha

"I think local seafood was one of the reasons I moved here. Head to Menemsha and pick up fresh lobster at Larsen's or bring your favorite bottle of wine to Homeport for BYOB and raw bar. Honestly, summer is what I wait for three seasons out of the year as a chef. Don't get me wrong, the other three have their marked virtues, for example: wild spring onions, pears and truffles, but the sun and heat bring such an effortless brilliance to the table. I especially look forward to a sip of iced chilled gazpacho, local Yellowfin tuna crudo and a perfectly grilled (48 oz.) strip steak on the grill."

Chef Erin Clarke reveals her favorite spots on the Vineyard. PROVIDED

How to explore scenic New England by rail

Your guide to summer train travel in the spectacular Northeast. ELIE LEVINE

New England's rich history, bustling cities, high peaks and spectacular views make it an ideal place to get out there and explore this summer. Trains are a fun, comfortable way to see countryside vistas without leaving your seat. Take a ride on the mountain-climbing Cog Railway, whisking you high into New Hampshire's Presidential Range, or explore the rest of the Northeast through other regional railway lines.

Reach new heights on the Cog Railway

Explore New England on the Cog Railway. Take a biodiesel or steam-powered train that ascends Mount Washington, the highest peak in the Northeast, in three hours. A guided tour will offer commentary on the history of the railway and surrounding region. The mountain is known for its unpredictable weather, and the train speeds through four climate zones on its way to the summit. From the peak, you can see breathtaking panoramic views of the Atlantic Ocean and Canada.

The Cog Railway not only serves as a fun attraction but also as a cultural hub, and this summer the railway base station will host seasonal events at its Marshfield Base Station. The annual Handcrafted in N.H. Festival on July 14 and 15 will vend jewelry and skincare products crafted by local artisans. The free Railway to the Moon SteamPunk

Festival on August 18 is bound to be an exciting day of learning about the artistic repurposing of 19th-century steam-powered technology. The festival will feature steel sculptures and gadgets, vendors and special presentations from sculptors and machine-makers.

The railway's vintage steam engine will make its way up the mountain at 9 a.m. daily through August. Tickets for the biodiesel train, which ascends the mountain ten times daily, are also available. Adult prices range from $51-$249, children's tickets range from $26-$41, and tickets for last train of the day sell for $15 less than trains at peak times. 9 a.m.-4:30 p.m., 3168 Base Station Rd., Mount Washington, N.H., thecog.com

Take a trip to the Cape

The CapeFlyer passenger train runs on summer weekends through Labor Day from South Station to Hyannis. Connections are available to ferries to Nantucket and Martha's Vineyard, and local buses run from Hyannis back up the Cape to Plymouth and Brockton. South Station to Hyannis, capeflyer.com

Explore Maine's towns

The Amtrak Downeaster runs from Brunswick, Maine, to Boston every day. A trip on the Downeaster is perfect if you'd like to spend the weekend taking in the sights and sounds of some of Maine's quaint cities. Brunswick, Maine, to South Station, amtrakdowneaster.com

6 Ways to have fun around Mass. this summer

We've got some ideas for how to make the most of your staycation. ELIE LEVINE

If you're looking to fill up your summer days with excitement, you don't need to travel too far. From live music to art exhibits, here are a few of the best activities the Bay State has to offer this season.

Catch a show at the Lynn Memorial Auditorium
Located in the historic downtown part of Lynn, this venue is your go-to spot for music performances this summer. This weekend, Stephen Stills and Judy Collins will perform Thursday, and Friday, see canine behaviorist Cesar Millan perform with his troupe of dogs. 3 City Hall Square, Lynn, lynnauditorium.com

Let your spirits soar at the North Shore Music

Theatre
Visit the largest operating theater in New England to see classic, kid-friendly musicals like "Peter Pan," "Heidi" and "Mamma Mia!" this summer. For those who want an inside look at the theater's workings, North Shore Music Theatre will also host a question-and-answer session on theater management July 17. Shows are priced starting at $12; kids' tickets are often discounted. 62 Dunham Rd., Beverly, nsmt.org

Explore China's history at the Peabody Essex Museum From Aug. 18 until next February, the Peabody Essex Museum (PEM) will debut its "Empresses of China's Forbidden City" exhibit, the first-ever international exhibition to highlight the empresses of China's last imperial dynasty, the Qing dynasty, which ruled the country from 1644 to 1912. Admission for adults is $20, seniors over 65 pay $18 and students with ID get in for $12. Salem residents with ID are admitted free. Tuesday-Sunday, 10 a.m.-5 p.m., 161 Essex St., Salem, pem.org

Rock out at the New Bedford Folk Festival
The Zeiterion Performing Arts Center will host the 23rd annual New Bedford Folk Festival the first weekend in July. The lineup features more than 50 traditional and contemporary artists across the folk spectrum, from bluegrass artists to Celtic folk musicians. Highlights include New England-based singer-songwriters Tom Rush and Cheryl Wheeler. Early-bird tickets are $125 for a weekend VIP pass, $30 for a weekend pass and $22.50 for a single day pass through June 23. Children 12 and under get in free. July 7-8, 51 Elm St., New Bedford, newbedfordfolkfestival.com

See a show al fresco at the Lowell Summer Series
Stop by the Lowell Summer Music Series to take in performances in genres that range from funk to rockabilly. See Lettuce, Brian Setzer's Rockabilly Riot, Boz Scaggs and other exciting acts. June 23-Sep. 8, 40 French St., Lowell, lowellsummermusic.org

Experience Boston on land and in water
If you haven't taken a duck tour of the city yet, now's the time. Tickets are $42 per adult, $34 for seniors and veterans, $28 for children ages 3-11 and $10.50 for children younger than 3 years old. Joel McHale talks Gronk, 'Fortnite' and why he loves working with Netflix

The comedian and actor performs in New England this weekend. MATT JULIA

When he's not busy working on "The Joel McHale Show with Joel McHale," the comedian is probably playing "Fortnite." ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

While watching his Seahawks lose to the Patriots in the Super Bowl definitely stung, that hasn't stopped Joel McHale from falling in love with New England. We caught up with the comic for a quick chat ahead of his return to the area for shows at the Chevalier Theatre June 22 and Foxwoods on June 23.

Where do you like to visit when you're in Boston? I stay near Back Bay, and there's two seafood places that are right there. There's also, I think it's called Skinny Puppy Coffee? I know there's a puppy in it. Wired Puppy! That's where I go. I go to Wired Puppy in Back Bay, and [Atlantic Fish Co.].

There's a lot of Gronk trade rumors. Would you like to see him in Seattle? Damn. You know, when you ditch someone like him who's a leader and who's also insanely talented, if he's at full strength, he's terrifying to deal with. I think they should definitely think about whether they really want to do this. Look, I'll take him. Yes, I would love it. Gronk, please come to Seattle.

I heard you competed in "Fortnite" at E3.

I was one of 100 of players, and two of the best players in the world, which are Ninja and Myth, were playing, so I thought, "I should have a real shot at winning this." The first round, I finished 35th, which I'll take any day of the week because I'm an old man and I'm not very good at it.

Why was Netflix the right fit for your new show?

They're the Gronk, the guy that sits on the field and is bigger and faster than everybody. Even though they're the biggest ocean, and there's a lot of big fish in there, if we could swim in that ocean, then the show could possibly stay on for more than a season. I was thrilled that they wanted to do it, because if you can succeed on Netflix, that means you're seen around the world instantly. ... I don't swear the entire time or anything, but now I can say whatever I want. I don't have a network. Like, E! was very good to me before, then they said stuff like, "Please don't make fun of the Kardashians." That was when I kind of saw the writing on the wall that that was going to be the end of it. Netflix, they hardly give any notes other than just like, "Be funny." I'm like, "Got it, I'll try. I can't guarantee it."

J.A. Bayona wants 'Jurassic World: Fallen Kingdom' to feel small

The director didn't want to go big with the latest dino-filled sequel. GREGORY WAKEMAN

When you think of the "Jurassic Park" franchise, the first word that comes to mind probably isn't small.

This is a big franchise with giant set pieces and humungous dinosaurs wreaking havoc. That's especially true for "Jurassic World: Fallen Kingdom," which has all of the above, plus an exploding volcano and even more dino-mayhem.

But taking the fifth "Jurassic Park" film into uncharted territory was always J.A. Bayona's goal, and, surprisingly, that included him repeatedly telling co-screenwriter Colin Trevorrow that he "wanted to go smaller" with "Fallen Kingdom" "instead of going big."

"Nowadays, Hollywood blockbusters are all about going more and more and more," Bayona tells Metro. "I felt that looking back at the first 'Jurassic Park,' the second half of the movie becomes more claustrophobic and suspenseful.

"I think people love to be scared by dinosaurs. So I told Colin, 'Let's get all the fireworks in the first half of the movie. Then once you have given the audience what they are looking for let's go to something they don't expect,'" he adds. "Let's try to put them into a very unexpected place. And build up the suspension in such a way that you give them a sense of fear and horror that we love from the first 'Jurassic Park.'"

Bayona is clearly beholden to the previous entries in the series, however, as he cites the legendary Steven Spielberg as one of his movie idols and admitted that "Jurassic Park" was a huge influence on "Fallen Kingdom," and used the 1993 classic as a launch pad to try something new with the "Jurassic World" sequel.

"I was always a huge fan of Steven Spielberg movies," Bayona says. "I always appreciated the way he was able to mix entertainment with important subject matters and, in that sense, 'Jurassic Park' was a reference movie for me."

"This is a movie that talks about attempting what we don't understand. I think it is very smart that the movie turns the whole dinosaur dilemma into something that affects us, in a very straight forward way," he adds. "I think the film takes a major step forward in what the 'Jurassic' universe has been showing us."

"Jurassic World: Fallen Kingdom" opens in theaters Friday, June 22.

Wrapped up in 'Jurassic World' with Jeff Goldblum

The beloved actor opens up about returning to the "Jurassic" franchise.

GABRIELA ACOSTA SILVA / MWN

Jeff Goldblum plays Dr. Ian Malcolm in "Jurassic World: Fallen Kingdom," the sequel to 2015's "Jurassic World," the fourth-highest-grossing movie in film history. The actor's performance as the mathematician is an iconic part of the first two films of the franchise, and his character has become a legend worthy of a meme. Let's get to know a little about the curiosities that surround Goldblum's world.

What reflections do these types of films let you do?

Tell me, do you know the song, "The Second Time Around" by Frank Sinatra? I like those lyrics. That's what it is like when making the films; it fills me with reflections, life seems a little fleeting. I am a tremendously lucky guy. I know that, I have had many opportunities to work with excellent people on interesting projects.

When Colin Trevorrow and the other writers approached you to say they wanted you back, how did you react?

Surprised! You could have knocked me down with a feather! I don't know if I was in shock, but someone had to throw me a blanket. I was floating on air. Like "Someone in Love" — another good song, by the way. And speaking of Colin, sweet genius, what a charming man! He is an inspiration and very generous. Then he directed me, like Dr. Malcolm and Jeff Goldblum, in the flesh, for the Super Bowl commercial.

How was your relationship with director J.A. Bayona?

I love all his films, but when we partnered, he was incredibly focused, passionate, bright, tasteful, cheerful and so kind.

Is Dr. Malcolm an easy man to play?

I bet he is. Let's see ... Writing about new theories and mathematical models, ethics in the use of beautiful science, respect for all life in our miraculous planet, innovative strategies of environmental protection and poetry, as well as continuing to support my wonderful daughter in her glorious freedom and empowerment. And, as a result, some memorable adventures, they live life at all times.

Did you show your children the original movies?

I just showed Charlie the one-minute Super Bowl commercial with me and the dinosaur. He was paralyzed and then said, "Dad, again!"

What was it like to interact with Bryce Dallas Howard and Chris Pratt?

It was electrifying. Not only were Bryce and Chris totally charming and welcoming, but the whole cast was full of energy and creative magic. They have my admiration and eternal respect. I missed seeing Geraldine Chaplin, whom I love.

Was there a chance to improvise at all?

There was Scope in my trailer, which I used to refresh my breath. Wait, I'm sorry, I see what you want to say. Improvisation: I love doing it, but this script was magnificently designed.

How Boston Marathon survivors influenced this 'Luke Cage' star

Simone Missick opens up about Misty Knight's journey for season two. MATT JULI

Things aren't going too well for Misty Knight (Simone Missick) when season two of "Luke Cage" kicks off.

The no-nonsense NYPD detective has been through a lot thanks to her run-ins with Harlem's bulletproof hero and his merry band of Marvel misfits, and even lost an arm while fighting evil ninjas in last year's "Defenders" finale. On top of missing a limb, the always-gung-ho heroine is in a rut after being forced into desk duty due to her injuries.

"She's depressed. She's in a place of not knowing who she is anymore," Missick tells Metro. "So much of her life has been tied to her physical ability... When you take a huge part of someone's identity away, they are left with not really knowing who they are."

The topic of depression couldn't be more timely, as the world is finally becoming more open to discussions around mental health.

Missick admits that she's struggled with depression in her own life, and was able to get through those tough times thanks to her group of female friends.

"I think that we all, at different various points in our lives, suffer from depression. I know that I certainly have," Missick says. "I remember reaching out to my girlfriends, and it was that circle of women that really helped me to talk about what I was going through and to find a light at the end of that tunnel."

Missick wanted to make sure that her portrayal of a character who loses a limb was authentic, so the actress did a lot of research into what happens to people who suffer from traumatic injuries. She was particularly influenced by the stories of Boston Marathon bombing survivors.

"Some of the stories that just really stood out to me specifically were the survivors of the Boston Marathon," Missick says. "They're these people who are at the top of their game physically, you know? And they're out there to participate and to win a race, and to have their limbs taken away from them in that way, the trauma that that brings, was something that I knew that I definitely had to explore as Misty."

Misty eventually gets her groove back thanks to her "Iron Fist" pal and partner-in-crimefighting, Colleen Wing (Jessica Henwick), who ends up having a bigger impact on her than Luke Cage or any of the other Defenders. Not only does Colleen hook Misty up with a fancy bionic arm, she also provides Missick's character with the support and motivation needed to move on with her life.

"This person was a part of this traumatic experience for her, and when she reaches out, to have Colleen answer is so important," Missick says. "Now, we are especially aware of how often we don't reach back. We don't pick up the phone. We don't check on people that we know are hurting."

"It is opening your arms and ears to being able to receive and to shoulder this with somebody that can save their life," she adds. "I think that Colleen did that for Misty and I think that I've definitely had people do that for me in my life. I pray that I have done that for others."

Comic book fans will be glad to hear that the Misty-Colleen relationship will continue to grow on "Luke Cage," as well as season two of "Iron Fist," which is set to air on Netflix later this year. As for a possible "Daughters of the Dragon" show, Missick would love to bring the comic series starring Misty and Colleen to life at some point.

"I love Jessica Henwick. She is so much fun to work with," Missick says. "In season two of 'Iron Fist,' you get to really enjoy them getting to know each other, but then also what that relationship would look like if it were on 'Daughters of the Dragon.'"

"I think that the fans would love it. I would love it. Jessica and I have talked about it," she adds. "It would be the best."

"Luke Cage" season two debuts on Netflix June 22.

What mysteries will finally be explained during this weekend's season finale? ALL PHOTOS HBO

'Westworld' season two is about to end, but what does it mean?

The second season of HBO's ambitious sci-fi Western concludes Sunday. ANDREW HUSBAND

At some point during the first season of HBO's "Westworld," everyone involved in the heady science fiction series — showrunners, talent, critics, audiences — realized one important thing: that the name of the game was "theories," and that trying to crack what was actually happening, or what would happen next, would carry the show forward.

Hence why, on the eve of the season-two premiere in late April, showrunners Jonathan Nolan and Lisa Joy took part in a Reddit AMA, promising to divulge "Westworld" spoilers freely. Instead, they trolled everyone with a video of star Evan Rachel Wood singing a piano cover of Rick Astley's "Never Gonna Give You Up."

Gags notwithstanding, fans and critics alike have continued to pronounce, evaluate and recommit to their best "Westworld" predictions throughout much of season two's run, which comes to an end on Sunday. Not even the talent, like actor Ed Harris, can help themselves.

"Even when I watch it, there's a lot of it that I don't always understand," he told the Huffington Post last week-end. "Yeah, I have no idea where it's heading. I don't even know if I'm in it or not [next season]. I figure I am? But I don't know in what capacity, and I don't know what the what will be happening."

Or Harris might actually understand what's going on with his villainous character, and know where his path leads in the second season finale, so he's just lying. After all, considering the sheer level of secrecy HBO maintains for tentpole shows like

"Westworld" and "Game of Thrones," misguiding the press and fans is all part of the plan.

And it's doing nothing to stop them, as audiences have been struggling with several questions this season. One of the biggest, following last week's penultimate "Vanishing Point," concerns whether Harris' William, better known as "The Man in Black," is an android or a human. (In the park, humans are called "guests," the robots "hosts.") Seeing as how we've seen him age thanks to flashbacks and time jumps, William is most likely human. However, this doesn't mean he's free of the late Dr. Robert Ford's (Anthony Hopkins) control. That's because another theory posits the so-called "door," which has served as season two's mystery box, is actually a window into Delos, Inc.'s secret attempts to collect data on park guests. Why? So they can one day control humans just as easily (or not) as the robot hosts.

Maybe William is a host, maybe not. Maybe Delos is secretly trying to figure out how to control living and breathing people for a profit, maybe not. Or, as yet another theory ponders, maybe Bernard's (Jeffrey Wright) physical form is currently occupied by another host entirely. Either way, "Westworld" fans will find out soon enough.

The "Westworld" season finale airs Sunday, June 24, at 9 p.m. on HBO.

USE YOUR TURN SIGNAL!

My grumble is drivers who don't use their turn signals. It is very frustrating to be driving behind a car whose brake lights come on leaving you wondering why as you can see there is no traffic stopped ahead. All is revealed when they decide to take a right turn or pull into a parking space. They might know what their intention is but the person in the car behind has absolutely no idea why they have just stopped in the lane without any warning. So drivers, please use your turn signals and let other drivers on the road know what you intend to do. And speaking of pulling into parking spaces, why do some people find it necessary to double park blocking the lane when there is a parking space available to pull into? But that's another day's grumble!

Trump backs down, signs order to end family separations at US border

Both the president's wife and daughter weighed in on his decision.

President Donald Trump backed down and abandoned on Wednesday his policy of separating immigrant children from their families on the U.S.-Mexico border, after images of youngsters in cages sparked outrage at home and abroad.

Trump signed an executive order requiring that immigrant families be detained together when they're caught entering the country illegally for as long as their criminal proceedings take. That may violate a court settlement on how long children may be held, setting up a potential legal fight, unless Congress acts on the issue.

The Trump order, an unusual reversal by him, also moves parents with children to the front of the line for immigration proceedings. The order does not end a 10-week-old "zero tolerance" policy that calls for criminal prosecution of immigrants crossing the border illegally.

"It's about keeping families together while at the same time making sure that we have a very powerful, very strong border," Trump said as he signed the order at an Oval Office gathering minutes before departing for a campaign event.

The videos of kids sitting in cages and an audiotape of wailing children had sparked anger in the United States from groups ranging from clergy to influential business leaders, as well as condemnation from abroad, including by Pope Francis.

Trump, an avid viewer of cable television news,

GETTY IMAGES

Donald Trump

recognized that the family-separation issue was a growing political problem, White House sources said.

First lady Melania Trump, in private conversations with the president, urged him to do something, a White House official said. In the Oval Office, Trump said he had heard from his daughter Ivanka about the policy, too.

"Ivanka feels very strongly. My wife feels very strongly about it. I feel very strongly about it. I think anybody with a heart would feel very strongly about it," he said.

The reversal also creates a series of new headaches for the administration, as it wrestles with where to house families that are detained together, possibly for long periods, and how to reunite families that already have been separated.

"This executive order would replace one crisis for another. Children don't belong in jail at all, even with their parents, under any set of circumstances. If the president thinks placing families in jail indefinitely is what people have been asking for, he is grossly mistaken," said Anthony Romero, executive director of the ACLU, in a statement.

Parents referred by border agents for prosecution are held in federal jails, while their children have remained in U.S. Customs and Border Protection custody or have been moved into detention facilities managed by the Office of Refugee Resettlement, a Department of Health and Human Services agency.

U.S. Customs and Border Protection said on Tuesday that 2,342 children had been separated from their parents at the border between May 5 and June 9.

The order directs the U.S. Justice Department to seek a modification of a court order to permit families that enter the United States illegally to be detained together until their criminal proceedings are concluded, a text of the order shows.

It also directs the Department of Defense to take steps to house detained immigrant families as needed. REUTERS

Hundreds rally for immigration protections at State House

Protesters called on state officials to pass the Safe Communities Act just hours before President Trump signed an executive order ending the separation of families caught at the border.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

Singing "We will walk with you," and holding signs that read "Mass. stands with immigrants" hundreds of protesters gathered at the Massachusetts State house on Wednesday to protest the family separation policy and to call on state officials to do more to protect immigrants currently in Massachusetts.

The protest occurred only hours before President Donald Trump signed an executive order that would end the practice of separating families caught illegally crossing the border by instead detaining families together indefinitely.

The action was organized by the American Civil Liberties Union of Massachusetts, the Massachusetts Immigrant and Refugee Coalition and others, spurred by the recent news stories of migrant children being held in cages, babies taken out of their immigrant mothers' arms and asylum seekers being targeted by intense immigration enforcement efforts.

"If our legislators do nothing, they are complicit," ACLU Staff Counsel Laura Rotolo said on the State House steps.

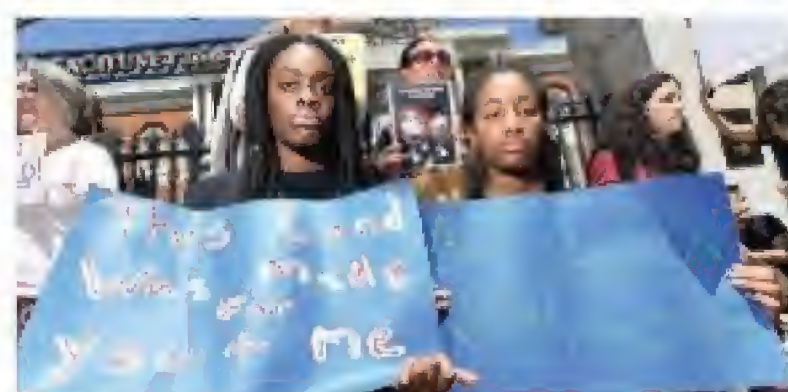

Ending family separation wasn't the only goal of Wednesday's State House protest, though.

"No hate, no fear, immigrants are welcome here," they chanted.

Advocates called on state officials to pass the Safe Communities Act, legislation that would put in place immigration protections like preventing police from asking people about their immigration status and limiting local police from working with federal immigration officers.

The Massachusetts Senate passed the Act in May, but it has not yet been passed by the House. Gov. Charlie Baker has said that he opposes the measure.

North-South rail link could cost up to $21 billion

The cheapest version of a rail link between North and South station would run about $12.3 billion, and a more extensive version could cost about $21.5 billion, according to a draft study by the MBTA.

The T's analysis, pursued with the consultant Arup, dwarfs the figures in a study publicized last summer by Harvard Kennedy School students estimating the rail link would cost between $4 billion and $6 billion.

Burying commuter rail trains and Amtrak lines deep beneath downtown Boston would approach the tab for demolishing the Central Artery overpasses and building the Big Dig tunnels. In 2012, state officials tallied up the Big Dig costs to $24.3 billion.

MBTA General Manager Luis Ramirez has so far reserved judgment on whether the North-South Rail Link would be a worthwhile pursuit, telling reporters he is looking forward to seeing the results of a study looking at the future of the commuter rail.

$12.3B

The cheapest version of a rail link between North and South station would run about $12.3 billion, and a more extensive version could cost about $21.5 billion.

The study, which will be the subject of a public meeting Thursday and publicized in draft form in early July, did not make any recommendations over whether to invest in the rail link. Former Govs. Michael Dukakis and Bill Weld have advocated for linking the two terminals that serve points north and south of Boston.

Dukakis urged the MBTA Fiscal and Management Control Board to be skeptical of the cost estimates, which he said are out of line with other tunnel-boring projects.

"I would simply urge you to take a very good look at the cost figures you've been getting. They bear no relation to reality," Dukakis said.

New stations along the connection would be buried deeper below ground than even the most subterranean MBTA station — Porter Square in Cambridge — and the logistics of digging the tunnel would tie up train traffic along the Worcester line, according to Scott Hamwey, a state transportation planner who presented the findings to reporters.

The new stations would be 115 to 195 feet deep, according to the study. Porter Square is 105 feet deep.

The tunnels would be dug by a boring machine, which would create "a little bit of a mess where you start the project," Hamwey said. The machine would be buried in the relatively tight right-of-way between Back Bay and South station where train lines run alongside the Massachusetts Turnpike.

The T could probably keep one line open along that right-of-way, but service to Worcester would likely terminate at Yawkey Station, and Amtrak service would need to be rerouted onto the Fairmount Line, according to Hamwey.

The portal north of town would be less disruptive, according to Hamwey. The scope of the endeavor would vary widely depending on whether another tunnel would be built for the Old Colony line or whether the Old Colony and Fairmount lines would continue to terminate at South Station.

Building the other tunnel — dubbed the Central Artery 4-Track approach in the study — would cost $21.49 billion with the actual tunneling accounting for $17.7 billion of that.

Other routes would be cheaper, though still a major commitment. For comparison, in 2015, MBTA officials estimated the cost of bringing the system into a state of good repair would be $7.3 billion.

If a new train tunnel followed roughly the path of the Central Artery it would cost $12.3 billion. If it chose a different route through the Financial District, it would cost $13.2 billion, and if it went another route that also passes through the Financial District it would cost $14.4 billion.

The cost of expanding South Station — an alternative to the North-South Rail Link that faces its own logistical hurdles — is $4.7 billion, according to the study.

The state's transportation efforts lost a potential funding stream on Monday when the Supreme Judicial Court tossed a proposed constitutional amendment from the ballot that could have generated an additional roughly $2 billion annually by adding a surtax to incomes over $1 million.

How to take a brewery road trip through the North East

So many breweries,
so little time.

PAT KING
patrick.king@metro.us

There are certain amazing things you just take for granted in life. There's no reason why, really. It could be that where you are living geographically gives you more access to a certain thing and then the magic doesn't seem so... magical anymore? This goes double for us beer lovers in the North East who have our fill of some of the best breweries in the country right in our backyards. When was the last time you paid them a visit? Here are some — not all — of the great breweries in the North East that you can check out in just a short drive.

Tree House Brewing

Charlton, Massachusetts
This beer mecca located in the heart of Massachusetts is known for its amazing beers like its extremely juicy and flavorful American IP “Julius” and their bold and unfiltered double IPA “Haze.” Tree House does not distribute its beer to sellers or bars so beer enthusiasts must take the trip to buy cans onsite. The brewery also has a tap room where you can try samples and pints of all of the delicious rotating brews. The brewery has a very strict limit on how many cans a person can purchase per day, so you may spend some time waiting on line to pick up your order. But trust us: It's well worth the wait.

Other Half Brewing

Brooklyn, New York
This Brooklyn brewery started by three friends — Sam Richardson, Matt Monahan and Andrew Burman — in 2014 with the simple mission: “to create beers that they wanted to drink from a company that they wanted to be a part of.” Ever since, they have taken over the five boroughs with some of the best beer around. With a huge list of rotating drafts and bottles and cans to go ranging from the “Double Dry Hopped Hop Showers” mosaic IPA and “Meek Millet” Saison, Other Half is one of the most delicious and versatile breweries you will visit throughout the North East.

Pizza Boy Brewing Co.

Enola, Pennsylvania
This brewery and restaurant located just outside of Harrisburg, PA has one of the most extensive selections of beer you will find — period. With 99 taps including 20-30 of its own delicious brews like its appropriately named “Don't Hop Believing” IPA, Pizza Boy is bound to have whatever your craft beer loving heart desires. Oh, and it also has a full restaurant serving wings, sandwiches, and, of course, pizza. So, once you've tried a few of the almost endless beers it has on tap, you can quench your inevitable beer munchies with some amazing snacks.

Lost Nation Brewing

Morrisville, Vermont
Up in the northern part of the Green Mountain State, Lost Nation Brewing is making some of the best beer in one of the states known producing some of the best there is. While breweries like Alchemist and Hill Farmstead are known for their hazy IPAs, Lost Nation is making waves with its “Pitch Black” and “Rustic” ales and its coriander and sea salt infused Gose which is, in my opinion, the most refreshing summer beer on the planet. While Vermont may be overflowing with amazing breweries, consider Lost Nation as you plan your next beer tasting road trip.

the number-one ranked German squad dropped a 1-0 decision to Mexico last Sunday while Sweden scored their first international goal in over 400 minutes and won their first World Cup opener since 1958 over South Korea in a 1-0 decision on Monday. However, the favorite should prevail in this tilt.

Mexico's defense would appear to be a strength going into their match with South Korea.

And Miguel Layun, Mexico's lead striker who took five shots against the Germans (one on goal), should have plenty of chances against South Korea's shoddy defense on Saturday.

The money line odds on Mexico are too low to make a hefty profit on, as they're anywhere from -170 to -200, depending on where you look. That means, at best, that you would have to risk $170 to make a $100 profit. However, many oddsmakers are offering Mexico -1 at odds of just over even money. This means a one-goal 'El Tri' triumph would result in a push, but a two-goal or more victory, which is a great possibility, would net a much nicer profit.

Mexico should make light work of an overmatched South Korea squad, so don't be afraid to back them on the goal line instead of the money line. Just keep in mind that soccer matches typically offer 'three-way' betting, meaning a draw is a separate outcome and does not result in refunds on either team.

2018 NBA MOCK DRAFT: SUNS TAKE AYTON

The 2018 NBA Draft has finally arrived. After weeks of workouts and rumors, 60 draft prospects will see their basketball dreams come to fruition. Here is Metro's first-round mock.

1. Phoenix Suns:

DeAndre Ayton

The Suns make the correct move here and keep the former Arizona Wildcat in state. Ayton averaged a double-double this season (20.1 ppg, 11.6 rpg) as a freshman. He will be a big help to Phoenix's offense and make life easier for third-year guard Devin Booker.

2. Sacramento Kings:

Marvin Bagley III

Reportedly, top prospects Luka Doncic, Jaren Jackson Jr., and Mo Bamba all are trying to avoid going to Sacramento. However, Bagley is not avoiding them, in fact he wants to be in Sacramento.

3. Atlanta Hawks:

Jaren Jackson Jr.

Even though it is enticing for the Hawks to take either Trae Young or Doncic, Atlanta goes for the versatile big man in Jaren Jackson Jr. Jackson has the defensive ability and the offensive skills to be effective in today's NBA.

The Hawks would love to have a frontcourt of Jackson and John Collins, who they drafted last year in the first round for the next decade.

4. Memphis Grizzlies:

Luka Doncic

Doncic can do a little bit of everything and will be the future franchise player in Memphis, after the Mike Conley Jr. and Marc Gasol era comes to an end.

5. Dallas Mavericks:

Wendell Carter Jr.

With Doncic off the board, the Mavs go after another Duke Blue Devil in Wendell Carter

Jr. Carter is another versatile big man, who can shoot the ball from the perimeter.

6. Orlando

Magic: Mo

Bamba

The Magic get their outstanding rim protector in Mo Bamba. The former Texas Longhorn has a ridiculous 7-foot-9 wingspan, which will help him be an immediate contributor on defense in the NBA.

7. Chicago Bulls:

Michael Porter Jr.

Porter Jr. finally hears his name called by the Bulls. There is a lot of risk with this pick because of back surgery he had this past season. However, the talent is there and he is worth the gamble for a Chicago team that is still rebuilding.

8. Cleveland Cavs:

Collin Sexton

The Cavaliers struggled this season by not having a competent point guard. Therefore, they take Sexton here at No. 8 to possibly get their rebuild underway. JOVAN ALFORD

CELTICS SHOULD TARGET KAWHI, AGAIN

PICARD

@DannyPicard

What exactly does Kawhi Leonard want?

Everyone keeps telling us he wants to play in LA. So that's it then. Leonard is going to either the Lakers or Clippers. Let's move on, right?

Not so fast.

With the NBA Draft this week, trade rumors are surely going to heat up. And Leonard's name will be smack dab in the middle of them. Why? Because he's obviously unhappy in San Antonio. But also because he might not end up in LA like everyone suggests.

I mean, honestly, there are probably a lot of NBA players who want to play in LA. Doesn't mean they ever end up there. And if Leonard doesn't end up in LA, it's because somebody swooped in and stole his heart.

I want that somebody to be Danny Ainge.

The Boston Celtics president of basketball operations is on the prowl right now. Don't tell me he's not.

Last summer, he threw all loyalty out the window because he had his eye on the ultimate prize: an NBA Championship. This summer, I expect his focus to be on the same prize.

Does that mean he'll seal the deal on another blockbuster trade? I don't see why he'd rule it out, especially given some of the names that are currently available, like Leonard.

According to reports, Ainge tried to trade for Leonard before the trade deadline, so it wouldn't be insane to suggest he'd have interest in Leonard again, right at this very moment.

Leonard could be traded before tonight's draft if the Spurs are looking for a top pick this year in return. But let's say he's not traded before the draft. The Celtics would be in prime position to make that move after Thursday night, if they really wanted to.

The C's could offer San Antonio one of their future picks from the 76ers/Kings, Clippers, or Grizzlies. Or they could do a straight up star-for-star swap, sending Kyrie

Kawhi Leonard soars to the rim against Minnesota. GETTY IMAGES

Irving to San Antonio, and bringing Leonard to Boston.

Both Irving and Leonard each have one year left on their contract with a player option for the following year. And I already loaded up the Trade Machine. The money works. Trade successful.

That's only if Irving hasn't committed to the Celtics long-term, behind the scenes. As I told you last week, if Ainge has any doubts about Irving's long-term plans, then he needs to be the aggressor right now while he still has the leverage.

San Antonio was on Irving's original list that he gave to the Cavaliers last offseason when he demanded a trade.

Boston doesn't look to be on any trade list that Leonard has provided. But if Ainge thinks Irving is going to walk next summer, what's the difference?

Well, there is one: LeBron James.

Leonard and James continue to be linked, as James reportedly has his eye on where Leonard ends up. It's also been reported that James will have a conversation with the Celtics — and several other teams — this summer.

If the Celtics weren't already an attractive basketball destination for James, then they certainly would be if Leonard was traded to Boston and Irving was elsewhere.

Acquiring Leonard and James is the type of offseason you'd expect to have in your NBA2K franchise mode. I get that. But if the two continue to be linked, the Celtics do have the assets to get nuts and pull it off.

Either way, Leonard's presence in Boston alone would undoubtedly make the Celtics the biggest threat to Golden State.

And I have a feeling Leonard would want to be part of that.

TO WIT:

The unit known as and numbered Unit #2 ("Unit") in the building known as 14 Woodford Street, Roxbury, Suffolk County, Massachusetts ("Building"), a condominium ("Condominium") established by the Grantor pursuant to Massachusetts General Laws, Chapter 183A, by Master Deed dated June 8, 2006, recorded with Suffolk County Registry of Deeds in Book 39765, Page 245 ("Master Deed"), which Unit is shown on the floor plans ("Plan") of the Building recorded with Suffolk County Registry of Deeds in Book 2006, Page 420, and is shown on the copy of a portion 8th Plan attached hereto and made a part hereof, to which is affixed the verified statement of a registered architect in the form required by Section 9 of Chapter 183A. The Unit is conveyed together with: 1. An undivided interest of 50% in the common areas and facilities ("Common Elements") of the Condominium described in the Master Deed, attributable to the Unit. 2. A right to park one (1) vehicle in the off-street parking area noted on the Plan as "Common Parking", subject to the restriction that the driveway shall be used in tandem and so, at any given time, vehicles used by any occupant shall be parked as far forward as possible and in a manner that allows another occupant to park a vehicle in the driveway consecutively behind each other. No Unit may have more than 1 car parked in the common area driveway at any given time. The Unit Owners shall cooperate in regard to moving cars (including exchanging keys if necessary) in the driveway to permit the car parked furthest forward to be moved when necessary. 3. An exclusive right to use any deck extending from the exterior wall of the Unit as shown on the Plan, subject to the rights of other Unit Owners to use said deck as an alternate means of ingress in the case of fire. 4. An easement for the continuance of all encroachments by the Unit on any adjoining unit or Common Elements existing as a result of construction of the Building, or which may come into existence heretofore as a result of settling or shifting of the Building, or as a result of repair or restoration of the Building or of the Unit after damage or destruction by fire or other casualty, or after a taking by condemnation or eminent domain proceedings, or by reason of an alteration or repair to the Common Elements made by or with the consent of the Trustees. 5. An easement in common with the Owners of other units to use any pipes, wires, ducts, flues, cables, conduits, public utility lines, and other Common Elements, located in any of the other units or elsewhere in the Condominium and serving the Unit. 6. Rights and easements in common with other Unit Owners as described in the Master Deed. 7. All easements, agreements, restrictions and conditions of record, insofar as the same are now in force and applicable. 8. The Unit is intended only for residential purposes, and no other use may be made of the Unit. The provisions of this Unit Deed, the Master Deed, the Declaration of Trust and the Plan, as the same may be amended from time to time by instrument recorded in Suffolk County Registry of Deeds, which provisions, together with any amendments thereto, shall constitute covenants running with the land, and shall bind any person having at any time any interest or estate in the Unit, family, tenant, and visitors, as though such provisions were recited and stipulated at length herein. For title reference, see Deed recorded herewith.

The premises are to be sold subject to and with the benefit of all easements, restrictions, encroachments, building and zoning laws, liens, unpaid taxes, tax files, water bills, municipal liens and assessments, rights of tenants and parties in possession, and attorney's fees and costs.

TERMS OF SALE:

A deposit of FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS AND 00 CENTS ($5,000.00) in the form of a certified check, bank treasurer's check or money order will be required to be delivered at or before the time the bid is offered. The successful bidder will be required to execute a Foreclosure Sale Agreement immediately after the close of the bidding. The balance of the purchase price shall be paid within thirty (30) days from the sale date in the form of a certified check, bank treasurer's check or other check satisfactory to Mortgagee's attorney. The Mortgagee reserves the right to bid at the sale, to reject any and all bids, to continue the sale and to amend the terms of the sale by written or oral announcement made before or during the foreclosure sale. If the sale is set aside for any reason, the Purchaser at the sale shall be entitled only to a return of the deposit paid. The purchaser shall have no further recourse against the Mortgagor, the Mortgagee or the Mortgagee's attorney. The description of the premises contained in said mortgage shall control in the event of an error in this publication. TIME WILL BE OF THE ESSENCE.

Other terms, if any, to be announced at the sale.
